IMPRESSED BY LOCAL SCHOOLS

Visiting Members of Central Indiana
Superintendents Club Compliment
Rushville System.

2 SUPERINTENDENTS ABSENT

Day of Business and Pleasure Will be Closed With Round Table
Discussion Tonight.

The visiting superintendents of public schools from all over central Indiana were pleased with Rushville's public school system. They admitted it. All but two members of the Central Indiana Superintendents' Club were here today for the third annual meeting of the club and were the guests of Prof. J. H. Scholl. They visited the schools all day and if they received any unfavorable impressions of the system and the management here, the public will never know of it, for they will dispense with those at the meeting behind closed doors this evening after the school hour. The round table discussion at the Windsor hotel tonight between the hours of 7:00 and 9:30 o'clock will close the day's meeting.

All but four of the superintendents who are members of the club had arrived at noon today and were here in time for the noonday luncheon at the Windsor hotel. The lunch was not free from "shop talk" as the superintendents are so imbued with their work that they can not refrain from discussing their pet subject, especially when they are in a crowd of men who are engaged in the same profession.

The morning was spent in visiting the schools by all of those that arrived in time for that portion of the day's business. The entire body visited the schools this afternoon, suiting their own pleasure and visiting

GANG OF SPEENORTS BEAT BOARD BILL

Worked This City a Few Weeks Ago
in Interest of a Cheap Magazine.

ONE APPEARED IN THEATER

Many people in this city will remember the gang of young fellows who worked here a few weeks ago in the interest of the Woman's World, offering glowing propositions to gain subscriptions. It will also be recalled that one of their number, W. R. Royer, assisted in a vaudeville performance at the Vaudet theater. Their career as hot air artists is about at an end.

Monday, according to the Hartford City Times Gazette they skipped from that city defrauding the manager of a hotel out of a $16 board bill. Four of the young men settled their accounts and the other four beat it. They registered as Charles Christina of Chicago, Ray Small of Chicago, Chauncey Ranch of Indianapolis, R. H. Harden of Indianapolis, A. W. Wolf of Detroit, E. Dillman of Detroit, Harry Atchison of St. Louis and W. R. Royer of Indianapolis. They arrived there Friday and began making nuisances of themselves by their persistency, as they did in this city. Their tactics were quite distasteful and in many instances were downright insulting.

REMAINS TAKEN TO MILROY

Funeral Services of Miss Margaret Henderson Held Today.

The funeral services of Miss Margaret Henderson, who died yesterday in Dublin were held today in Milroy. Miss Henderson was 75 years old and had been ill for some time with a severe attack of pneumonia. She was a former resident of Greensburg. She is survived by her sister, Mrs. William Sharp.

DAN M. WILLIAMS ARRESTED AGAIN

Sheriff Served Another Warrant on Burglary Charge--Had Just Been Released Under Bond.

IS NOW IN GREENFIELD JAIL

Sheriff Jesse Cox served another grand jury warrant on Daniel M. Williams Monday afternoon on a charge of burglary, and he was lodged in jail until bond is furnished, says the Greenfield Reporter. Williams had been released from jail only a few days, furnishing $800 bond required in the grand jury charge of grand larceny, in connection with the robbery at Knightstown in which the confession of Van Deery at Indianapolis, implicated Williams and Cordia Martin.

This last charge of burglary and arrest is said to be in connection with the Star Store robbery over a year ago, which was also confessed too by Deery, implicating Williams and Martin. This last arrest was a surprise to the people in general as it was not known that another charge had been lodged against him by the grand jury. The same bond of $800 as in the charge of grand larceny is usually required in a charge of this kind which will make a total of $1600 bond required of Mr. Williams on the two charges.

FAST GAME FOR FRIDAY NIGHT

Local High School Team Will Play
Richmond--Defeated Rushville
Once This Year.

GINGS TO MEET NEW SALEM

The local high school basket ball team will take on the fast Richmond team here Friday night. The game promises to be one of the best seen on the local floor this year as both teams are evenly matched. In a game several weeks ago played in Richmond, the Rushville team was defeated by the narrow margin of one point, the final score being 30 to 29. Richmond has a very strong team, having defeated some of the best in the State. They have one and lost one with Connersville and as the locals have beaten Connersville twice, the "dope" all points to a Rushville victory. Captain Bebout's men are practicing daily for the contest and expect to be in fine shape. The curtain raiser will be between the Gings Independents and the New Salem high school teams.

WILL BOW OVER BIER TOMORROW

Admirers of Benjamin S. Parker Will Pay Respects to Late Poet
Thursday Afternoon.

FUNERAL TO BE AT 2:30 O'CLOCK

"Flower City" Bard Has Been Closely Identified With Henry County's Progress.

The funeral services of Benjamin S. Parker, who died at his home in New Castle yesterday at 12:30 o'clock will be held at the late residence tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The services will be in charge of the Rev. Oliver Frazier of Chicago, formerly the pastor of a New Castle church. Burial will take place in the New Castle cemetery.

In the death of Benjamin S. Parker Indiana loses a loyal son, a good citizen and a genial poet. He was a Hoosier by nativity, as well as his mental characteristics and his love for the State. Born on a farm in Henry county, February 10, 1833, he had only such educational advantages as were furnished by the local schools at that period, yet he was successful in many things. He was a close observer and diligent student all his life, and he even found time to study law. As a school teacher, merchant, author, editor, United States consul, legislator and county official his activities covered a period of more than half a century.

Shortly after the close of the war Mr. Parker left his farm on which he was born and went into business in Lewisville, having no thought at that time that he would again take up farm life and incidentally, turn to literature. He taught school in Henry and Rush counties and was in constant demand as a speaker before literary societies, teachers' associations, Sunday school and political gatherings. Though admitted to the bar he did not push his law practice. Mr. Parker was an early contributor.

PETITION SENT TO WASHINGTON

Over 1400 Rushville People Want the Postoffice Closed on Sunday to Allow Employees Rest.

JUST ONE DISSENTING VOICE

A petition, containing the names of 1438 Rushville people was mailed to the postoffice department in Washington last night. The paper was sent to petition the postal authorities to close the local postoffice on Sunday so that the city letter carriers and the rural mail carriers might enjoy the Sunday vacation. The movement is in accord with that all over Indiana, where already many postoffices have been closed on Sunday on account of the overwhelming number of signatures which have been sent to the postoffice department. It is likely that the local petition will be granted. It was circulated by J. P. Stech former city letter carrier.

There was one dissenting voice in the long list of petitioners. O. C. Norris objected to the postoffice being closed on Sunday and sent a pamphlet to the department in which he explained his views on the subject.

HAS THE LARGEST STABLE IN STATE

Harrie Jones Will Train Horses From
All Parts of the United States
And Canada.

REPRESENT TWENTY STATES

Local Trainer Will Campaign Three Stables, he to Take the Grand Circuit.

Harrie Jones, the prominent local trainer, who has in past seasons had a wonderful stable of fast horses, promises to excel all former records this year when he will have at Riverside park the largest string that was ever trained in the whole State of Indiana. Mr. Jones' reputation for handling horses has been such that he has been able to attract horses here from all parts of North America. A season never passes that he does not have animals from far distant points.

He not only has a larger number this year than ever before, but also a higher class collection of fast animals. Not only horses that have made race records, but others that are green have been placed in his stable to be given the careful training that the owner wants the youngsters, which he expects much of, to have. The list of horses which will be found in his stable this year come from twenty different States and Canada.

Besides the number that is already here Mr. Jones expects ten more to arrive between this time and the first of next month. He expects to campaign his stable through the Grand Circuit this coming season and besides that, plans to send a stable over the Great Western Circuit and one over the half mile tracks.

His stable for 1911 will include the following: Aleyfras, 2:03 1/4, owned in Grand Rapids, Mich; Sallie Stiles, 2:06 1/4, from Tennessee; Goldie May, 2:08 1/4, from Judson, Ind.

MRS. A. SPENCER IS NAMED SOLOIST

Daughter of Dr V. W. Tevis Will Make First Appearance With Orchestra in Indianapolis.

LOCAL PEOPLE WILL ATTEND

That Mrs. Arnold Spencer of Indianapolis, daughter of Dr. V. W. Tevis of this city, is fast gaining recognition as a soloist of ability is evidenced by the fact that she has been announced as the soloist at the second concert of the Indianapolis orchestra which will be given at the Shubert Murat theater Sunday afternoon, March 26.

The Indianapolis Star says Mrs. Spencer's engagement was disclosed at the rehearsal yesterday morning and created general satisfaction because of her recognized capability. It is believed Mrs. Spencer's participation in the concert will prove an added attraction and will strengthen the program noticeably.

It is not unlikely that many Rushville people will hear Mrs. Spencer in her first appearance with an orchestra. It has been announced that the orchestra management already has a number of requests from out of the city for seat reservations.

WILL APPEAR IN MILROY

Jesse Pugh Company to Play There
Next Winter.

The Redpath Lecture Bureau of Chicago has sold a lecture course to Milroy people which will be given there next winter. The Jesse Pugh company of which Jesse Pugh of this city is a leading member, will have a good date on the program of concerts and lectures. It will probably be the first time that he will appear in this county since he has taken up his new work on the lyceum platform, where he is making success far beyond his dreams. Mr. Pugh's company will appear in Milroy on Saturday and the company will spend Sunday here.

MERCHANTS WILL HAVE BIG MEETING

Feature of Tonight's Session Will be a Smoker--Anyone Interested is Invited.

The Merchants' Association will meet tonight in regular session instead of tomorrow night. The feature of the meeting will be a smoker and anyone at all interested in the city is invited to attend. It is planned to make this meeting a banner one in the history of the association and an evening of pleasure as well as business is promised. The newly-elected officers will begin their duties tonight and the president Tony Schrichte will announce the names of the new committees. It is the hope of the new officials to start the new year with plenty of enthusiasm and to this end the meeting has been arranged.

ALREADY COVERED BY NICHOLSON LAW

City Councilman Explains it Was Not Necessary to Include Amusement Clause in Ordinance.

SAME RESULTS ARE OBTAINED

In last Saturday's edition of the Daily Republican in explaining how the saloon ordinance was made by a series of compromises it was said as follows:

"Another section taken out was that one pertaining to free lunch, and the maintaining of any other business in a saloon. This section also applied to games of chance, musical instruments or other entertainment. If this section had been left in and passed it would have done away with the pool tables which will probably be found in several places when they open up for business."

A member of the city council has called the attention of the Daily Republican to the fact that that clause was not stricken from the first draft of the ordinance by reason of the fact that it was not intended that such a law was not wanted, but that that feature was already covered by the Nicholson law and upheld by the Proctor restrictive law which was only recently passed.

HAS EVIDENCE FOR NEW TRIAL

John Osborne Says Counsel Will go
After Noble's Acquittal in Different Manner.

TO SHOW MOTIVE FOR MURDER

Will Bring Out Relationship That Existed Between Albert Sprague
And His Wife.

That Ben Noble's attorneys will go after his acquittal in an entirely different method is apparent from the interview which John Osborne, a member of the counsel gayed out after his arrival in Greensburg yesterday. The law allows the defendant thirty days in which to file a motion for a new trial, which will take up the greater part of this vacation. With the motion must be filed a reason to show that new evidence has been gained which may add to that already introduced. The motion will be argued before the court and he will decide whether or not a new trial will be granted. In the meantime Ben Noble will be held here in jail as Judge Blair did not impose sentence after the verdict.

According to the Greensburg News, Mr. Osborne, one of the counsel appointed by Judge Blair to represent and defend Noble yesterday stated that in their motion for a new hearing they would present many things that would change the complexion of the case. He remarked that the appointment to defend the indicted man had come so suddenly that he had entered the case almost wholly unprepared. He was unable to get in as testimony many incidents in the case that should have been presented.

"In our appeal for a new trial," Mr. Osborne stated, "we will base such action, among other things, on the life of Albert Sprague, the murdered man, and especially the relationship that existed between Sprague and his wife."

He asserted that the attorneys for the defense had evidence at hand that would show a motive why Sprague was assassinated, and they could prove who did the deed which Noble now stands convicted of. Mr. Osborne said that naturally public sentiment in Decatur county, where the crime was committed, was clearly against Noble, but that heretofore there has never been shown a motive why Noble could have committed the crime.

LIKES GRAHAM BUILDING

Upland College President Comes
Here For Ideas.

Dr. Monroe Vayhinger, president of Upland College at Upland, Indiana, was here yesterday inspecting the Graham school building. The college authorities are planning to erect a new college building and hearing of the Graham high school building here, the president came here to get ideas for the new structure. He was shown over the building and expressed himself as being very much impressed with the arrangement and the whole plan of architecture.

CARRIERS GET INCREASE.

R. F. D. News: After July 1, 1911, rural carriers will receive $1000 per year for routes of 24 miles or more and a proportionate increase for routes of less length. Furthermore, there will be no danger of consolidation of rural delivery and star route service during the next fiscal year.

Formalin Seed Treatment Will Prevent Oats Smut

A. G. Johnson, assistant botanist at the Purdue University agricultural experiment station has sent out the following bulletin covering oat smut:

Were your oats attacked by smut last year? Are you using those oats for seed? If so, the formalin seed-treatment should be applied to such oats before sowing, even if only a small amount of smut was present, in order to prevent the disease in this year's crop.

Oat smut causes an enormous annual loss, the country over, and Indiana's share is much too great. It should, and can be prevented.

Oat smut is a disease caused by a microscopic organism, a fungus, which entirely destroys the heads of the affected plants. This fungus lives and grows within the tissues of the affected oat plants, entirely invisible form without until the diseased plants begin to head out. The smut fungus then enters the young

"would be" kernels and destroys both them and the accompanying chaff, and masses of worthless black, powdery material are produced instead. These powdery masses consist of innumerable, minute spores (corresponding to seeds) of the smut fungus. These smut spores are blown about by the wind to sound kernels of the healthy oat plants near by, and remain on them ready to take advantage of the situation when such oats are used for seed. When such oats are sown, the attached smut spores germinate under the same conditions and at the same time that the oat kernels do, and the fungus, by its very minute, tube-like growth, penetrates into the tissues of the very young plant. Here the fungus thrives, drawing its nourishment from its host, and grows up within the oat plant through the season. When the latter heads out, the heads are entirely destroyed. The kernels and chaff are largely, if not entirely, changed to black, powdery masses, the spores of the fungus. These spores are thus ready to be blown about to sound oat kernels and carry the disease to the next year's crop.

It is clear, then, that the point of attack is in the seed. If the seed oats can be so treated as to kill the smut-fungus spores clinging to them and yet not injure the growing quality of the oats themselves, then such a treatment is successful and should be applied to seed oats wherever there is danger from smut. Both in specially conducted experiments and in ordinary farm practice, the formalin seed treatment has been repeatedly found to fulfill both of these requirements admirably. It not only has the merit of being highly efficient, but it is safe, inexpensive, and easy of application. The treatment is as follows:

After the seed oats are well cleaned with a fanning mill, spread them out on a clean floor or canvas, or in a tight wagon box. While shoveling them over sprinkle them, until thoroughly moistened, with the following solution, which may be mixed in a barrel and applied with a sprinkling can: one pound (about one pint) of formalin (40 per cent. formaldehyde, procurable at drug stores) thoroughly mixed with 50 gallons of water. Continue to shovel the oats until all kernels are evenly moist, then cover the pile with clean grain bags or canvas and leave covered at least two hours. The formaldehyde gas thus confined, and evenly distributed through the pile kills the smut spores, but does not injure the oats. After the two hours, uncover and spread out the oats to dry, stirring occasionally with a garden rake, or otherwise. When sufficiently dry, the oats are ready to sow. If they are to be kept for some time before sowing, they should, of course, be more thoroughly dried to prevent heating. Ordinarily it is most convenient to treat the oats the afternoon or evening before they are to be sown. Then in the morning they are ready.

Each gallon of the made up solution is enough for a little more than a bushel of oats, that is one pound of formalin mixed with 50 gallons of water is enough for 50 or 60 bushels.

The price of formalin (40 per cent. formaldehyde) varies from 25 to 40 cents per pound. It should be practically as clear as water.

After treating the seed oats, avoid contamination with smut spores from untreated oats, as in bags, bins, etc. Clean bags and bins should be used, or they may be cleaned by washing with boiling water or the formalin solution.

Two or three men can easily treat 50 bushels in less than half an hour, that is, to the point of covering the pile. The treatment should be generally practiced where there is any danger from oat smut. Try it.

AMUSEMENTS

English's opera house, Indianapolis, will offer on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, with a Saturday matinee, March 16, 17, and 18, "A Broken Idol," the musical farce in two acts with book by Hal Stephens, lyrics by Harry Williams and music by Egbert Van Alstyne. There is a thread of story of course. A party of Californians visit Chinatown in Los Angeles. The head of an idol is cut off by three men during a spree, who with fear that they have really killed a man, are making all sorts of efforts to get free from the clutches of the law. It is only at the final moment they know it was merely a graven image. There is an heiress with two lovers, one an English nobleman and another one a young man about town, who is accused of having committed a theft in order that he may suffer disgrace. Of course, it is alright in the end. This attraction has been seen in Indianapolis before when it was first produced and those who saw it then can vouch for its sterling qualities. There are a host of catchy song hits and the cast is an exceptional one. There is also a chorus of exceptional ability and beauty. From the moment the curtain goes up there is not a second but what the audience is interested in something on the stage.

Beginning March 15 and for three days with Saturday matinee, Grace George will present at the Shubert-Murat theater, Indianapolis, her latest and most successful comedy, "Sauce for the Goose," which is said to frolic somewhat along the line of "Divorcees," telling the story of a literary miser, who, after three years of married life, seeks the association and companionship of a widow. Mrs. Alloway, claiming she meets his conception of an intellectual woman, and terming his wife a goose, although he dearly loves her. On the third anniversary of their marriage, the husband to take his wife to the opera, but later breaks the engagement to dine with Mrs. Alloway in her apartments. Meanwhile, the wife, according to the old saying "What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander," accepts the invitation of a Mr. Travers, dining with him in his apartments after the opera. The husband returns, finds a note left by the wife and goes straightway to the Travers apartment to declare war. Travers flees and the wife coyly meets her husband, explaining nothing, but tantalizing him to extreme jealousy by her evasion of his questions and the admission that Mr. Travers had been making love to her. In an adroit and cleverly sarcastic manner, Miss Bonner tells her story, which is interpreted in Miss George's cleverest style, who incidentally, will display a number of rich creations in gowns and hats.

Shopping at Home

THE most clever and progressive women have learned the immense advantage of carefully reading the advertisements.

Those who are more dull of apprehension prefer to wander around in different stores hunting for the special bargains and unusually attractive articles.

The up-to-date woman of today sits down and takes her paper and reads the advertisements carefully before she goes "shopping."

She has learned by experience that the merchant who is up-to-date in his methods and has the most desirable offerings, is the one who makes his influence felt through his advertising.

If he did not do this he would not be an up-to-date merchant.

The back number merchant does not advertise.

Shopping at home, looking through the ads, before you start out, saves time and annoyance and is sure to result in both economy and satisfaction.

It pays to read the advertisements.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR WHEAT CROP

Will Not be Banner Yield—Future Acreage May Depend on Outcome This Year.

GRAIN HAS BEEN PROTECTED

The prospect for a wheat crop next summer can be guessed at with a fair degree of accuracy now and the indications all point to a good crop, though not decidedly to a banner yield. During the winter the young grain has been better protected than one would think who had watched the weather conditions closely. While the total fall of snow has not been great it has fortunately come at times when it was worst needed and the warm spells of weather have changed to cold gradually, for the most part, thus favoring the tender blades to their great advantage.

With many farmers in Rush county and in surrounding counties as well, wheat was on trial for its life and in a way, is yet on trial. During the last few years wheat has been a more or less discouraging investment for the farmer, and he has come to look upon it as a doubtful thing. Several progressive grain growers were heard to say this winter that next summer's wheat yield would settle with them the question of whether to raise it thereafter or to sow some surer, though less desirable crop.

TRUCK FARMERS

The Payne Investment Co. are sub-dividing the great plantations of Southern Louisiana into small farms, and selling them to Northern farmers.

We have sold four of these plantations (14,000 acres) since December 1st last. We are now selling "Belle-Helene" Plantation, a beautiful tract of 3800 acres, fully improved and in crops for this year, situated about sixty miles west of New Orleans, and 25 miles south of Baton Rouge, the Capitol of the State.

This plantation lays along both sides of the Illinois Central R. R. and faces the Mississippi river. It is on the old historical pike which connects those two cities.

The soil is a dark, rich, alluvial, the equal to the famous "Celery-Beds" of Kalamazoo, Mich., which are held at from $1,000 to $1,500 per acre. The Mississippi River Valley is the greatest Market-Garden proposition in this country today. There are thousands of acres of cabbage, turnips, onions, head-lettuce, strawberries, etc., now ready for the market. They are being shipped every day right now to Chicago, St. Louis and other northern markets by the train load, and bring fancy prices at this time of the year. A fast freight leaves New Orleans every night for the north, picking up the truck along the valley, and arriving in Chicago the next night.

The climate is delightful all the year, owing to the gulf breeze which always prevails and there is absolutely no malaria. Garden truck is grown every month in the year, and by rotating the crops you have truck to sell at all seasons. This land will also produce 100 bushels of corn to the acre and other crops such as oats, rye, alfalfa, sugar-cane, etc. It is the richest soil in the world, and under proper cultivation will pay for itself in from one to two years.

Every farm touches the railroad, and there is a station on the plantation. We are selling these fine, improved farms on the following very easy terms. One fifth down and the balance in ten years, or if you prefer on an easy crop-payment plan which practically makes the land pay for itself and support a man's family at the same time.

We run our next free excursion there on Tuesday March 21st. Come and see that wonderful country before the good things are all gone. For full particulars, call or address, C. M. WISEMAN,

TOOK THE WIND OUT OF THE OPPOSITION

Canadian Pact to Reach Congress In Original Form.

Washington, March 15.—The evident determination of the house Democrats to pass the Taft agreement without tacking any tariff revision measures to it has disappointed Republican opponents of Canadian reciprocity. The senate progressives and a number of the regulars were elated last week when the announcement was made, seemingly by authority, that the Democratic committee on ways and means planned to add amendments to the cotton and wool schedules of the Canadian agreement. Since then the committee, or at least a majority of its members, have experienced a change of heart. Within the past day or two Chairman Underwood has caused it to be known that the Canadian agreement would be reported to the new house precisely in the form in which it was submitted to congress at the recent session. Whether the committee has changed front because of intimations of the president that he disapproves of the plan to add anything to the Canadian bill, or whether the Democrats came to the conclusion that it would be better politics to ratify the agreement just as it came from Mr. Taft, is not made clear. All that the leaders can be induced to say on the subject is that the agreement is to be passed by the house as it was outlined in the McCall bill.

This is bad news for the opposition. The Republican senators who will fight the pact, notably Senators Cummins, LaFollette and Clapp, will have a hard job on their hands.

TWO PRIESTS GONE

Hungarian Congregations at Bridgeport Scandalized by Pastors.

Bridgeport, Conn., March 15.—The congregation of St. John's Hungarian Roman Catholic church in this city, one of the largest and oldest Hungarian churches in the diocese of Hartford, was startled to learn that the explanation of the sudden disappearance last Sunday night of their much respected pastor lies, according to the statement of the trustees, in the disappearance of all but $25 of the $6,900 supposed to be in the church treasury. The disappearance of Father Desiderius Major, coming on the heels of what really amounted to the flight of the Rev. Paul Stavrovski, pastor of the Hungarian Greek Catholic church of this city, three weeks ago, has caused a tremendous sensation.

Believed He Has Gone West.
Newman, Ill., March 15.—No trace has yet been found of the Rev. Cortland Harry Livingstone, who is wanted on a charge of grand larceny. He is said to have preached a trial sermon at Swazee, Ind., Feb. 26, two days before his alleged thefts were discovered. It is believed that he has gone west.

Wealthy Farmer Dies of Exposure.
Orion, Ill., March 15.—Charles Swanson, aged seventy-two years, owner of four farms, is dead as a result of being frozen last January. He lived alone and when found was almost dead from cold and hunger, having been unable to notify anyone of his condition.

Many Jobless in Wisconsin.
Madison, Wis., March 15.—In the opinion of Labor Commissioner Beck there are 30,000 unemployed men in Wisconsin.

Congress May Look Into Matter of Certain Fat Jobs.

AMIALE CUSTOM OVERDONE

The Practice of Caring For Down-and-Out Congressmen, It Is Pointed Out, Is Carried on at the Expense of the Theories of Economy Which the Insurgents Argue Should Mark the Expenditure of Public Funds.

Washington, March 15.—When the extra session of congress begins President Taft's general plan of economy in public expenditures is likely to receive vigorous support from an unexpected quarter. Certain of the insurgent Republican senators believe that substantial progress can be made in the direction of economy by abolishing some of the commissions or at least reducing the salaries now paid to former senators and representatives who have ensconced themselves in these government berths. Some of the senate insurgents are prepared to argue that the policy of reducing the salaries of clerks in the classified service and at the same time paying large salaries to "lame ducks" from Capitol hill is a misguided plan of retrenchment which saves at the spigot but wastes at the bung.

The insurgents have directed their attention, for instance, to the international commission on boundary waters, a joint commission with Canada. A lump sum was appropriated by congress for this commission. The state department fixed the salaries of the American commissioners at $10,000 a year each. The president appointed ex-Senator Thomas H. Carter of Montana and ex-Representatives James A. Tawney of Minnesota as members of the commission. The salary to be paid the commissioners is $2,500 more than they drew as legislators.

Another plan proposed by the insurgents looking to retrenchment of public expenditures involves the personnel of the monetary commission, made up chiefly of ex-senators and ex-representatives, who since their retirement from congress have been drawing salaries equal to those paid to them as senators and representatives. The insurgent senators believe that the commission plan of caring for ex-senators and ex-representatives is an amiable custom but an expensive one, and they are talking seriously of directing an inquiry into the matter.

AN EASTERN WAR

Affairs Between Russia and China Nearing a Crisis.

St. Petersburg, March 15.—Russia's latest note to China is regarded here as an ultimatum and the occupation of Chinese territory is expected to follow.

Dispatches from Harbin report much military activity on the part of China in Manchuria, where it is apparently believed that China intends to resist Russia's movements. It is predicted that if this proves true events are likely to lead to the partition of Manchuria between Russia and Japan. Japan has proclaimed martial law in southern Manchuria and is distributing arms and building barracks.

A Triple Tragedy.

San Francisco, March 15.—R. R. Mostin, turret champion of the cruiser California and the son of a rich family in Washington, shot Hugo Rhein, night clerk of a hotel on the Barbary coast, Bessie Cook, a dance hall girl, and then himself. All three died before the patrol wagon came. Mostin had resigned from the service and talked of marrying the girl. The two went to a room in a hotel, where they quarreled so noisily that the night clerk went to the room to expostulate. As he opened the door, Mostin shot him and then turned the pistol on the girl and himself.

Good Money Sent Abroad.

Rome, March 15.—Premier Luzatti, in the chamber of deputies, discussed the question of emigration and declared that it had its advantages. In the course of his remarks he stated that remittances of money from Italians in the United States exceeded $92,000,000 in 1907, while it fell to $70,000,000 in 1908 and $54,000,000 in 1909.

With an automatic street sweeper such as was today, the city council will be at little expense with the new brick streets.

"A little dirt now and then is relished by the best of men," sighed a pedestrian as he staggered down Main street today.

Fortunately, due to the civilization of hickory but of the best flesh and tendent's Club of today is not made of our own Rushville. The Superinblood of the land.

"It is not as natural for men to go down hill," observes the Muncie Press, "as it is for water to do the same thing." But it is well to remember there are a lot of unnatural men in Rushville especially those who live in North Main and Perkins streets.

They say that Tom Geraghty's New York letter which will appear in the Daily Republican Saturday far outshines most magazine stories—that is so far as Rushville people are concerned.

tor to both New Castle and State papers, and in 1875 he began the publication of the Mercury in his home City, which was continued under the name of Parker & Wickersham until 1882. In 1880 Mr. Parker was the elector from his district on the Republican national ticket and cast the vote of the district for Garfield and Arthur. In 1882 he was named by President Arthur as United States consul to Sherbrooke, Canada, and served until the change in administration.

On his return to his home county Mr. Parker was elected county clerk in 1896 and held that office from 1888 to 1892. In 1900 he was chosen to represent Henry county in the lower house of the general assembly and served with credit to himself and his county.

In the line of literature Mr. Parker brought attention to Newcastle and Henry county. In 1871 he published his first work. It was entitled "The Lesson, and Other Poems," and afterwards came the "Cabin in the Clearing," "Hoosier Bards" and "Rhymes of Our Neighborhood." His last book, "Noontide," was published in 1905 the dedicatory lines telling of the abiding hope and love of the author. It was dedicated to his father and mother. "Hoosier Bards" was dedicated to all lovers of birds and trees, and the "Rhymes of Our Neighborhood" to the surviving friends of his childhood and youth.

Poetry, however, was only a recreation to Mr. Parker, but his verses were well enough known to be included in Coggs' "Poets and Poetry of the West," published in 1860, and in "The Union of Art and Poetry," by John G. Piatt, in 1881. In the latter collection one of his poems was illustrated. He was a contributor to the Indianapolis Journal, and in later years wrote occasionally for the Indianapolis News.

Mr. Parker was not a great poet, but he was true one, and though he did not attempt lofty flights he never struck a false note. He was a lover of nature and of the simple and knew how to interpret them.

Mr. Parker was the second president of Association of Writers, an honorary member of the Century Club of Indianapolis, of the Audobon Society and one of the organizers of the Henry county Historical Society. He was the last of the early promoters of the Historical Society and gave much of his time to its affairs. In 1867 Mr. Parker introduced the custom of strewing flowers on the graves of soldiers of the Union in the civil war, some years before it was adopted by the Grand Army of the Republic.

Mr. Parker and Huldah Wickersham were married January 21, 1869. Three children were born and all survive. They are: Miss Florence Parker, a teacher in New Castle schools; Allegro, the wife of Samuel J. Burkin of New Castle and Jethro engaged in the mercantile business in Cleveland, O.

WOULD KNOW SEED CORN CONDITIONS

Purdue Experiment Station Has That Idea in View in Running Special Over L. E. & W.

WILL VISIT RUSHVILLE MAR. 24

With the idea of giving direct information as to the condition of the seed corn for 1911, the Extension Department of Purdue Experiment Station has started an investigation. Representatives of the department are visiting farmers in the several counties along the L. E. & W. railroad and are obtaining samples of the seed corn which will be germinated at the university. The results of these tests will be used on the corn train which will run over the L. E. & W. railroad March 21 to 25, and will be in Rushville early on the morning of the 24th.

Data derived from this investigation up to this time indicate that the condition of the seed corn is very poor. The vitality of the seed is uniformly low and farmers must necessarily exercise great care in the selection of their seeds. Those interested in the results of this investigation should arrange to hear the lectures which will be given in the Lake Erie Corn Improvement Lecture train.

Blind Man's Holiday

By O. Henry

(Copyright by Ainslee's Magazine Co.)

LAST for the man and for the artist with the shifting point of perspective! Life shall be a confusion of ways to the one; the landscape shall rise up and confound the other. Take the case of Lorison.

From his point of perspective he saw himself an outcast from society, forever to be a shady skulker along the ragged edge of respectability. He was self-condemned to this opinion, as he was self-exiled, through it, to this quaint southern city a thousand miles from his former home. Then he fell in love with a girl whom he met in a cheap restaurant, and his story begins.

The Carabine d'Or is an ignominious ghost of the Rue Chartres. The safe where Blenville and Conti dined, where a prince has broken bread, is become a "family restaurant."

It was at this restaurant that Lorison first saw the girl. A flashy fellow with a predatory eye had followed her in, and had advanced to take the other chair at the little table where she stopped, but Lorison slipped into the seat before him. Their acquaintance began, and grew, and now for two months they had sat at the same table each evening, not meeting by appointment, but as if by a series of fortuitous and happy accidents. After dining, they would take a walk together in one of the little city parks, or among the panoramic markets where exhibits a continuous vaudeville of sights and sounds. Always at eight o'clock their steps led them to a certain street corner, where she prettily bade him good night and left him. "I do not live far from here," she frequently said, "and you must let me go the rest of the way alone."

But now Lorison had discovered that he wanted to go the rest of the way with her, or happiness would depart, leaving him on a very lonesome corner of life. And at the same time that he made the discovery, the secret of his banishment from the society of the good laid its finger in his face and told him it must not be.

On this night, after the usual meal at the Carabine d'Or, he strolled, with his companion, down the dim old street toward the river.

The Rue Chartres perishes in the old Place d'Armes.

Often the two sat in this square, but tonight Lorison guided her past the stone-stepped gate, and still riverward. As they walked he smiled to himself to think that all he knew of her—except that he loved her—was her name—Norah Greenwood, and that she lived with her brother. They had talked about everything except themselves. Perhaps her reticence had been caused by his.

They came, at length, upon the Revere, and sat upon a great, prostrate beam.

He began by telling her that he was in love with some one to whom he durst not speak of it. "And why not?" she asked, accepting swiftly his fatuous presentation of a third person of straw. "My place in the world," he answered, "is none to ask a woman to share. I am an outcast from honest people; I am wrongly accused of one crime, and am, I believe, guilty of another."

Then he plunged into the story of his abdication from society. The story, pruned of his moral philosophy, deserves no more than the slightest touch. It is no new tale, that of the gambler's declension. During one night's sitting he lost, and then had imperiled a certain amount of his employer's money, which, by accident, he carried with him. He continued to lose, to the last wager, and then began to gain, leaving the game winner to a formidable sum. The same night his employer's safe was robbed. A search was had; the winnings of Lorison were found in his room, their total forming an accusative nearness to the sum purloined. He was taken, tried, and, through incomplete evidence, released, smutched with the sinister devoirs of a disagreeing jury.

"It is not in the unjust accusation," he said to the girl, "that my burden lies, but in the knowledge that from the moment I staked the first dollar of the firm's money I was a criminal—no matter whether I lost or won. You see why it is impossible for me to speak of love to her."

"It is a sad thing," said Norah, after a little pause, "to think what very good people there are in the world."

"Good?" said Lorison. "I was thinking of this superior person whom you say you love. She must be a very poor sort of creature."

"I do not understand."

"Nearly," she continued, "as poor a sort of creature as yourself."

"You do not understand," said Lorison, removing his hat and sweeping back his fine, light hair. "Suppose she loved me in return, and were willing to marry me. Think, if you can, what would follow. Never a day would pass but she would be reminded of her sacrifice. I would read a condescension

"In spite of—"

"Rather say because of it. You have come out of your past noble and good. Your heart is an angel's. Give it to me."

"A little while ago you feared the future too much to even speak."

"But for you; not for myself. Can you love me?"

She cast herself, wildly sobbing, upon his breast.

"Better than life—than truth itself—than everything."

"And my own past," said Lorison, with a note of solicitude—"can you forgive and—"

"I answered you that," she whispered, "when I told you I loved you. She leaned away, and looked thoughtfully at him. "If I had not told you about myself, would you have—would you—"

"No," he interrupted; "I would never have let you know I loved you. I would never have asked you this—Norah, will you be my wife?"

She wept again.

"Oh, believe me; I am good now—I am no longer wicked! I will be the best wife in the world. Don't think I am—bad any more. If you do I shall die, I shall die!"

While he was consoling her, she brightened up, eager and impetuous. "Will you marry me tonight?" she said. "Will you prove it that way? I have a reason for wishing it to be tonight. Will you?"

One of two things was this exceeding frankness the outcome; either of importunate brazenness or of utter innocence.

"The sooner," said Lorison, "the happier I shall be."

"What is there to do?" she asked. "What do you have to get? Come! You should know."

"A city directory first," he cried, gayly, "to find where the man lives who gives licenses to happiness. We will go together and rout him out. Cabs, cars, policemen, telephones and ministers shall aid us."

"Father Rogan shall marry us," said the girl, with ardor. "I will take you to him."

An hour later the two stood in Father Rogan's study.

"Father Rogan," said Norah, "this is he."

"The two of ye," said Father Rogan, "want to get married?"

They did not deny it. He married them. The ceremony was quickly done.

In the dark hall Norah whirled and clung to her companion, tearful.

"Will you never, never be sorry?"

At last she was reassured.

At the first light they reached upon the street, she asked the time, just as she had each night. Lorison looked at his watch. Half-past eight.

"Please leave me here as usual tonight," said Norah, sweetly. "I must—I would rather you would. You will not object? At six tomorrow evening I will meet you at Antonio's. I want to sit with you there once more. And then—I will go where you say." She gave him a bewildering, bright smile, and walked swiftly away.

Surely it needed all the strength of her charm to carry off this astounding behavior. It was no discredit to Lorison's strength of mind that his head began to whirl.

As soon as he had recovered his wits, he proceeded along the street in an aimless fashion. After drifting for two or three squares, he flowed into a somewhat more pretentious thoroughfare.

As he stood before a window near a corner, his ears were assailed by a waxing clamor and commotion.

Two ponderous policemen were conducting between them a woman dressed as if for the stage, in a short, white, satiny skirt reaching to the knees, pink stockings, and a sort of sleeveless bodice, bright with reluctant, armor-like scales. Upon her curly, light hair was perched, at a rollicking angle, a shining tin helmet. The costume was to be instantly recognized as one of those amazing conceptions to which competition has carried the inventors of the spectacular ballet.

The young woman fixed her unshrinking gaze upon Lorison, and called to him in the voice of the wronged heroine in straits:

"Say! You look like a good fellow; come and put up the ball, won't you? I've done nothing to get pinched for. It's all a mistake. See how they're treating me! You won't be sorry, if you'll help me out of this. Think of your sister or your girl being dragged along the streets this way! I say, come along, now, like a good fellow."

It may be that Lorison, in spite of the unconvincing pathos of this appeal, showed a sympathetic face, for one of the officers left the woman's side, and went over to him.

"It's all right, sir," he said, in a husky, confidential tone; "she's the right party. We took her after the first act at the Green Light theater, on a wire from the chief of police of Chicago. It's only a square or two to the station. Her rig's pretty bad, but she refused to change clothes—or, rather," added the officer, with a smile, "to put on some. I thought I'd explain matters to you so you wouldn't think she was being imposed upon."

"What is the charge?" asked Lorison.

"Grand larceny. Diamonds. Her husband is a jeweler in Chicago. She cleaned his show case of the sparklers, and skipped with a comic opera troupe."

The policeman, perceiving that the interest of the entire group of spectators was centered upon himself and Lorison—their conference being regarded as a possible new complication—was loath to prolong the situation—which reflected his own importance—by a little afterpiece of philosophical comment.

"A gentleman like you, sir," he went on, affably, "would never notice it, but it comes in my line to observe what an immense amount of trouble is made by that combination—I mean the stare, diamonds and light-headed women who aren't satisfied with good homes. I tell you, sir, a man these days and nights wants to know what his women folks are up to."

The policeman smiled a good-night, and returned to the side of his charge, who had been intently watching Lorison's face during the conversation, no doubt for some indication of his intention to render succor.

Now, at the failure of the sign, and at the movement made to continue the ignominious progress, she abandoned hope, and addressed him thus, pointedly:

"You damn chalk-faced gutter! You was thinking of giving me a hand, but you let the cop talk you out of it the first word. You're a dandy to tie to. Say, if you ever get a girl, she'll have a picnic. Won't she work you to the queen's taste! Oh, my!" She concluded with a taunting, shrill laugh that rasped Lorison like a saw, as the policeman urged her forward.

Then there came upon Lorison an overwhelming revulsion of his perspective. In an instant he had been transformed from a somewhat rancid prowler along the fishy side streets of gentility into an honest gentleman, with whom even so lordly a guardian of the peace might agreeably exchange the compliments.

Thus, then, first broke the spell, and set thrilling in him a resurrected longing for the fellowship of his kind, and the rewards of the virtuous.

But the thing that struck home and set him raging was the part played by the Amazonian prisoner. To the counterpart of that astounding beligerent—identical, at least, in the way of experience—to one, by her own confession, thus far fallen, had he, not three hours since, been united in marriage. How desirable and natural it had seemed to him then, and how monstrous it seemed now! How the words of diamond thief number two yet burned in his ears: "If you ever get a girl, she'll have a picnic." What did that mean but that women instinctively knew him for one they could hoodwink? Still again, there reverberated the policeman's sapient contribution to his agony: "A man these days and nights wants to know what his women folks are up to." Oh, yes, he had been a fool; he had looked at things from the wrong standpoint.

DOESN'T KNOW WHO WILL BE GOVERNOR

But the Lieutenant Governor Admits to Indianapolis Reporter That They're talking of Him Some.

THAT IS FOR THEM TO DECIDE

Lieutenant Governor Frank J. Hall was in Indianapolis yesterday finishing up the signing of legislative papers, says the Indianapolis Star. He said he doesn't know who will be the next governor.

"The boys are talking of me some," he admitted, "but, of course, that's something for them to decide."

He expressed the opinion that President Taft has done a wise thing in mobilizing American troops along the Mexican border. He said much American property is at present practically in the hands of the insurgents and that a show of arms along the frontier will do more than anything else to save this property for its owners. Lieutenant Governor Hall will leave today for his home in Rushville.
